WHAT IT SOLVES

Contrast, sharpness and a stand that adjusts

QHD at 200 Hz
2560 × 1440 with 1 ms MPRT over DisplayPort; over HDMI it delivers 144 Hz, also above the usual.

5000:1 contrast
In a dark scene you can make out detail, not a grey smudge.

AMD FreeSync Premium
The top tier of the standard: it syncs and also compensates when frame rates drop.

Height, swivel and pivot
A stand with all three adjustments: it rises, swivels 20° each way and rotates 90° to work in portrait.

What 5000:1 means: contrast measures the difference between the brightest white and the darkest black the panel can show at the same time. A regular IPS is around 1000:1; this VA panel reaches 5000:1, five times more. In practice, a night scene shows real blacks instead of the washed-out grey of a low-contrast panel.
